

Bolderwood: Radnor Trail

Head deep into ancient and ornamental woodland.

Once past the Radnor Stone, this trail passes through sweet chestnut, oak and beech dating from the 1860s. It then skirts the fenced boundary of Mark Ash Wood, an ancient and ornamental woodland, where you can see pollarded beech trees.

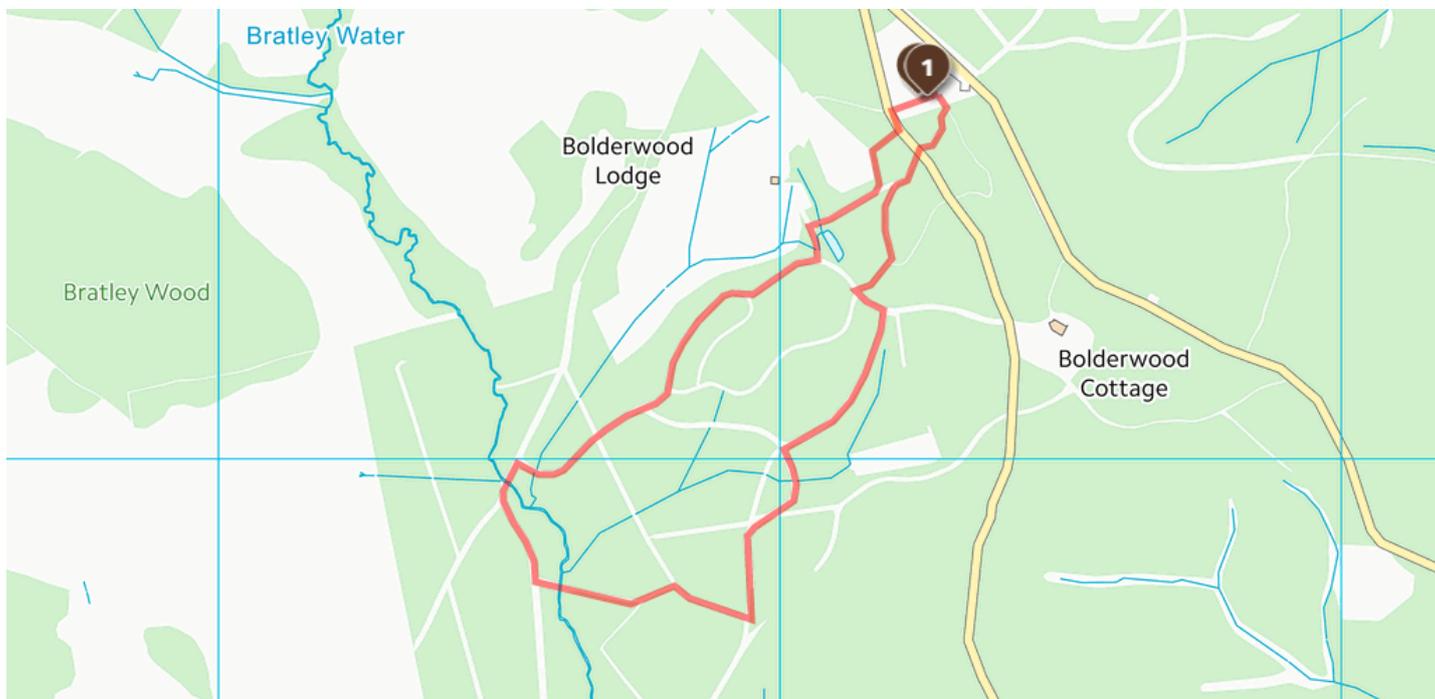

Bratley Water, flowing south to join the Blackwater, a tributary of the Lymington River, is an ideal spot to rest and have your picnic. Here you will find stands of Norway spruce planted in the 20th century which are thriving in the moist valley bottom. The trail finally leads you past the deer viewing platform where you can often see a herd of fallow deer.

Be Forest Friendly: The New Forest is a Site of Special Scientific Interest with over 2,000 varieties of fungi, many of which are rare and internationally-important species. We appeal to people to look but don't pick. Commercial harvesting is not permitted and foray leaders must obtain a licence. Visit www.forestry.gov.uk/newforest for latest details.

Free walking routes app

The best way to follow this route, and all the walking routes on this website, is by downloading our free walking routes app for iPhone and Android.

Download using the buttons below and leave a rating if you enjoy it.

© Crown Copyright and database rights 2015 Ordnance Survey

1. Walk start and end point

To start the Bolderwood trails go through the gate, which has a low, soft latch, to the right of the information unit and follow the coloured waymarker posts which will guide you around the trails and back to the car park.

Quick Info

Start / Finish

This Forestry Commission trail is a waymarked walk. Just follow the waymarker posts to enjoy an easy to follow route for all.

Did you enjoy this route? Then let others know by rating it on our website

Bolderwood car park, grid ref SU 243 086, no postcode.

Distance

Under 2 miles

Duration

Under 1 hour

Surface

The path is a moderately smooth gravelled surface, with two short but fairly steep slopes, and frequent resting places.

Getting there...

No public transport links, parking at Bolderwood car park.

www.newforestnpa.gov.uk/routes

SHARE WITH newforestnpa on:

